Claim Objections

Claim 1 is objected to because of the following informalities: The penultimate line in the claim recites, "respect to a plan". Based on the copending application claim language, this is apparently a typographic error meant to read, "respect to a plane". The examiner has interpreted the claim to read the latter with respect to the instant Office action. Appropriate correction is required.

Double Patenting

The nonstatutory double patenting rejection is based on a judicially created doctrine grounded in public policy (a policy reflected in the statute) so as to prevent the unjustified or improper timewise extension of the "right to exclude" granted by a patent and to prevent possible harassment by multiple assignees. See In re Goodman, 11 F.3d 1046, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993); In re Longi, 759 F.2d 887, 225 USPQ 645 (Fed. Cir. 1985); In re Van Ornum, 686 F.2d 937, 214 USPQ 761 (CCPA 1982); In re Vogel, 422 F.2d 438, 164 USPQ 619 (CCPA 1970); and, In re Thorington, 418 F.2d 528, 163 USPQ 644 (CCPA 1969).

A timely filed terminal disclaimer in compliance with 37 CFR 1.321(c) may be used to overcome an actual or provisional rejection based on a nonstatutory double patenting ground provided the conflicting application or patent is shown to be commonly owned with this application. See 37 CFR 1.130(b).

Effective January 1, 1994, a registered attorney or agent of record may sign a terminal disclaimer. A terminal disclaimer signed by the assignee must fully comply with 37 CFR 3.73(b).

Claims 7-12 are provisionally rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 1-6 of copending Application No. 20030163015A1. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because of the following:

Pending claims 7-12 contain the same material elements as copending claims 1-6 respectively but are written using slightly different language.

For example, copending claim 1 recites:

- A patient's bed
- A transport equipment for injecting and transporting a charged particle beam toward the bed
- An irradiation field forming means
- A rotating irradiation body provided to rotate about an axis of rotation wherein the irradiation field forming means is eccentrically arranged such that an axis of irradiation thereof passes a position different from the axis of rotation
- The patient's bed being arranged on an opposite side of the transport equipment to a plane which contains the axis of rotation and is substantially perpendicular to the axis of irradiation.

Concomitantly, pending claim 7 recites the following:

- A bed for supporting an irradiation target
- A beam transport device for transporting a charged particle beam
- An irradiation field forming means
- A rotating body provided with said beam transport device and said irradiation field forming device, the rotating body being rotatable about an axis of rotation, the irradiation field forming means eccentrically arranged to the axis of rotation such that an axis of irradiation thereof passes a position different from the axis of rotation.

- The bed being arranged on an opposite side of said beam transport device with respect to a plane which contains the axis of rotation and is substantially perpendicular to the axis of rotation.

The above comparison of pending claim 7 and copending claim 1 is given to illustrate the manner in which the pending claims similarly recite the invention recited in the copending US Application.

The limitations presented in pending claims 7-12 differ from that which is claimed in copending claims 1-6 only slightly by the wording of the claims. Materially, the elements recited in the copending claims coincide with that which is claimed in the instant application.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to claim that which is recited in claims 1-6 of copending US Application 20030163015A1 because despite the slight difference in wording, the pending claims do not patentably distinguish a different invention from that recited in the copending US application.

This is a provisional obviousness-type double patenting rejection because the conflicting claims have not in fact been patented.
